Scripture Reflection

Remember, too, that darkness is the absence of light. Scientist tell us the absence of light creates a darkness that cannot get any darker. Think about it. Put yourself in a darkened room strike one small match. Immediately, that tiny light dispels all the darkness around you. So its for us who long for the light that is Easter. The darkness through which we walk would be forever dark had God not struck the match that is Christ's risen life. Welcome and embrace our Lord's gift of new life and walk from the darkness toward the light.

And then there is this last Easter gift: Decide today to be a person of Easter light. Today we bask in the warm glow of the Paschal light. Today, we gladly, joyfully sing our Alleluia praise. Today, smiles break on our faces in raucous celebration of our Lord's victory over death. But what of tomorrow?

We will decide today whether or not we will walk into God's good future tomorrow and the following day and every day thereafter as men and women of light. We will decide whether or not we spend our time trudging through the darkness of sin and defeat. Or we will decide to be like Mary Magdalene, moving toward the morning light, becoming a person made new by God's Easter gift.

So what will it be for us dear ones. I invite us to dare become the persons God in Christ so longs for us to be. Throw off the darkness that would keep us from this dawn's breaking light. Let's say "Yes" to Jesus Christ, the light of the world. Say "Yes" while it is still dark and make our way to Easter's breaking dawn. Alleluia! Christ is risen! Amen.
